

Using and Citing Sources

Exercise 1

Directions: On your own paper, take each quotation (Roman numerals) and use it first as a complete sentence. Next, use parts of it as an integrated quotation in a sentence of your own. Finally, write out the source as it would appear on the source list in the style (MLA, APA, Chicago) directed by your instructor.

Example:

“I retain my belief in the necessity of a common American culture. But I am lately appalled by voices raised in this country against Mexican migrant workers.” Richard Rodriguez. Mexicans in America. Cato Unbound. August 14, 2006. www.cato-unbound.org/2006/08/14/richard-rodriguez/mexicans-america.

1. In an article in Cato Unbound, Richard Rodriguez says: “I retain my belief in the necessity of a common American culture. But I am lately appalled by voices raised in this country against Mexican migrant workers.”

2. Richard Rodriguez, a well-known writer and spokesman for the Mexican-American community, says he maintains his belief in a “common American culture,” but he decries all the antagonism “against Mexican migrant workers.”

Rodriguez, Richard. “Mexicans in America.” Cato Unbound 14 Aug, 2006. www.cato-unbound.org/2006/08/14/richard-rodriguez/mexicans-america.

I. “Hawaii, universally acknowledged as the extinction capital of the world, had the most to lose when the Polynesian voyagers first came ashore, and with the later help of Europeans and Asian colonists, they extinguished most of its native bird species.” Edward O. Wilson. Half -Earth: Our Planet’s Fight for Life. New York, Norton, 2016. page 19.

II. “These questions and many others emerge from the first comprehensive statistical summary of so-called close encounters: 121,036 eyewitness accounts, organized county by county in each state and the District of Columbia, from 2001 to 2015.” Ralph Blumenthal. People Are Seeing U.F.O.s Everywhere, And This Book Proves It. New York Times. April 24, 2017. www.nytimes.com/2017/04/24/science/ufo-sightings-book.html?module.

III. “Many Americans, especially young Americans and scientists, believe that current federal policies and plans to address climate change are too little, too late.” p. 79. Julia Olson. Youth and climate change: an advocate’s argument for holding the us government’s feet to the fire. Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists. 2016, Vol. 72 Issue 2, p79-84. 6p. DOI: 10.1080/00963402.2016.1145903. Academic Search Complete.